W. A. Handt, a deputy sheriff in Cook county, was arrested for the third time in Lake county Saturday by Motorcycle officer Henry Wallenwein on a charge of speeding. The first time he was arrested by Motorcycle Frank Valenta, and more recently was picked up by Motorcycle Thos. Burnette, on speeding charges.

The Board of supervisors will meet Sept. 9, for the purpose of taking up the proposition of disposing of the poor farm north of Libertyville, and locating it on some lower priced land. New buildings are needed and it is argued that as long as it would be necessary either to replace the old ones, or to make extensive improvements to the present ones it may be more economical to sell the high priced land and locate the county farm buildings on cheaper land in some other part of the county. It was stated that the present location of the county farm is detrimental to the development of city property to the north of the present limits of the village of Libertyville.

A special election will be held at Richmond, Ill., on Saturday, August 30, to vote on bonding the Richmond-Burton district for $85,000 to erect a new high school building.

Lewis O. Brockway, Lew Hendee, Ira Pearsall, Roy Bracher, Fred Kirschner, John R. Bullock, L. J. Willmot, John T. Hoban, Emil Flicke, and Ray Paddock, county officials left Sunday for Springfield where they will attend the state meeting of county recorders, circuit clerks, county clerks, treasurers, probate clerks and supervisors. It is expected there will be 500 county officials in attendance. The convention opens Aug. 26 and will continue three days.

Two more beer running trucks fell prep to the sponge squad under C. A. Brune early Saturday morning. This makes the third truck that has been captured by State's Attorney A. V. Smith's moppers in two days. The two trucks taken about 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning contained 40 barrels of beer, 25 in one truck and 15 in the other. They were nabbed in Belvidere road near Thomas' Corners. The trucks were camouflaged with boxes and blankets. They were headed in the direction of Chicago and evidently had come from the southern part of Wisconsin. Walter Tracy and J. C. Wilson, both of Chicago, were arrested as drivers.

It looks as though favorable action would be taken in the near future to insure a new city hall for Burlington by 1925. Two plans have been submitted for the proposed building, one by Openheimer & Obel of Green Bay to cost $40,000 and the other by J. Mandor Matson of Racine at $32,000. With a few changes it is thought the former plans will be most acceptable.

Desertion was the charge in a suit for divorce filed in Circuit court in Waukegan last week by Joseph Walz of Antioch through Attorney E. M. Runyard. Walz claims that he was married on August 15, 1921, and that his wife, Amelia deserted him on June 19, 1922.

A large dairy barn and three silos were totally destroyed by fire Saturday night and several other buildings endangered on the Samuel Insull farm located three miles south of Libertyville on the Town Line road. Several tons of hay had been recently stored in barn and it is believed that spontaneous combustion caused the blaze.

Fred Bulkley, superintendent of the farm, and his wife had retired for the night about 10:15 o'clock but were aroused about 10:45 by the barking of the dogs. The flames lighted the sky.

When the fire was discovered it had gained such a headway that it was sweeping through the barn. At once the farm hands were aroused and rushed to the barn and drove over seventy head of cattle from the barn. It was only due to the fact that the fire started in the loft of the barn and had not yet reached the main floor that it was possible to save the cattle.

20 Years Ago in Antioch

Thursday, August 25, 1904

Miss Minnie Lux attended the teachers institute at Waukegan Wednesday.

Miss Lottie Jones and Mrs. Jay Haycock were Chicago visitors Wednesday.

Miss Lillie Watson is attending the teachers institute in Waukegan this week.

The Lake County fair will be held at Libertyville on August 30-31 and September 1-2.

Mrs. J. T. Wilton and son Robbie have just returned from a trip to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

On Saturday evening, August 20, occurred the marriage of Miss Lella Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Williams of this place, to Charles K. Anderson of Chicago. The marriage being solemnized at the M. E. church, at seven o'clock, Rev. S. H. Newman, brother-in-law of the groom assisted by Rev. Wm. C. Cleworth, the pastor, officiated.

The church was tastefully decorated with smilax, palms and flowers the deep golden shades of the "golden glow" which were placed in large bouquets among the decorations blended with green of the foliage and seemed to cast a mellow light over all and enveloped in its golden flood the bridal party as they stood at the altar rail.

Little Olive Renahan had the misfortune to fall from a hammock and break her arm one day last week.

Hermie Bock left Wednesday for the Woodstock fair where he will act as one of the judges of the speed program.

Five dollars reward for return of pocket book lost between brick yard and Antioch postoffice, belonging to Mrs. E. L. Clark.

There will be a meeting of the stockholders of the Antioch Condensed Milk company at the town hall in the village of Antioch Saturday evening, Aug. 27, for the purpose of electing directors and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

Ira Blackwell Indicted Friday in McHenry Co.

Ira Blackwell, former sponge squad member here, and more recently special deputy at McHenry, was indicted Friday by the grand jury at Woodstock on a charge of violating the prohibition law, according to the word received from that city Monday. Thirteen indictments were returned altogether all except one involving the prohibition law. Among those indicted was Andrew J. Grom, Chicago, whose story in the first place led to the arrest of Blackwell some days ago. Blackwell at the time was accused of aiding beer runners in McHenry after he had been let out of the county's employ as a special deputy. He is said to have taken $2 a barrel for allowing beer to be transported through the county at the same time offering "protection."

Grom after he had been called before the grand jury Friday is believed to have backed down on his story and refused to talk.

A warrant charging perjury was immediately obtained and was served upon him. His bond was set at $2,500.00.

ANTIOCH JUNIORS WIN AT AURORA

Members of the Antioch Sewing club gave a demonstration at the Aurora Fair that won them the right to represent Lake County at the State Fair at Springfield. The two girls, Mary Herman and Katherine Minto won over the Round Lake and Libertyville delegation. It is hoped that the Antioch team will win at Springfield so as to be able to compete against other states. The local team was coached under the capable leadership of Mrs. Sherwood.

Phillip Simpson won first with his Jersey heifer in the Junior class and second in the open class, competing against many Jersey breeders in the Middle West, Phillip is a member of the Antioch Boy's Club.

The Lake County Judging team composed of Phillip Simpson and Lewis Barthel of Antioch and Arthur Dillon of Wauconda and coached by C. L. Kuttel placed 5th at the Fair.

Grade School Classes Start Next Tuesday

The Grade school will open for the 1924-25 term Tuesday, September 2. All pupils are requested to bring all their last year's text books the first day. In many instances it will not be necessary to purchase new text books; however, if a book has been completed, bring it just the same as it may be possible to sell it to another pupil.

The faculty is as follows:

D. L. McTaggart—Principal, Grades 7 & 8, Music.

Cathryn Bouzek—Art, Assistant in grades 7 & 8.

Hester Goidy Garland—Grades 5 & 6.

Alma Frojen—Grades 3 & 4.

Fern Dunham Lux—Grades 1 & 2.

New Agricultural Subjects Offered at High School

A new subject, Farm Management, is to be offered to Juniors and Seniors enrolled in the Agricultural Department of the local school. This subject properly taught will prove even more interesting to students than other agricultural subjects. A study of the course will include the following subjects: Development of American Agriculture, business forms, notes, receipts, bills, contracts, etc. practical farm bookkeeping, farm records, farm inventory, types of farming and results, special advantages of stock farming. Cost of production of crops and animals. Pure bred vs. grade or scrub live stock or seed; Mapping the farm for systems of crop rotation, farm and home conveniences, farmers' organizations and extension service, factors affecting farm profits, surveys of local farms, cooperative buying and selling, rural credits and other subjects.

Students who wish to become farmers, farm managers, agricultural teachers, managers of cooperative companies, or business men of any kind would do well to take this course. The far insight which it gives to agriculture is prove enough that it is a course that will broaden the mind of any student.

Another course offered to the beginners and Sophomores is Animal Husbandry. Mr. C. L. Kuttel, the instructor, has spent much time the past few months outlining a course of procedure for this subject. He has devised schemes for the presentation of the subject that will be new in Vocational Agriculture. One of the aims of the year's work will be to produce a winning livestock judging team. A two weeks Short Course on the subject of Poultry will also be given to the fathers and the older sons.

The Animal Husbandry course will consist of detail study of horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Dairying is to be taken up along with the subject of Dairy Cattle. A short time is to be spent on each of the following: Cheese making, butter, manufacture, ice cream making at home, testing milk for butter fat etc.

Students expecting to become farmers, cheesemakers, buttermakers, milk dealers, poultrymen, veterinarians, official cow testers, herdsmen, showmen, livestock judges, agricultural chemists, etc., are advised to take this course.

Registration day at the Antioch High School is on August 29. Classes start Sept. 2nd.

Removal of 7:40 Soo Train Brings Protest

The announcement that the Soo Line will take the 7:40 morning train to Chicago off the Antioch schedule caused much comment at the Business Club meeting on Monday evening.

The summer schedule will be discontinued after Labor Day and the most convenient train for the business men, the 7:40, will cease stopping here September 9.

The Business Club has letters on file from the Soo Line stating that Antioch would receive the benefit of this train throughout the winter months, and President Abt of the club immediately sent in a protest by telegram to the Soo Line officials.

Shed Light on Skeleton Finding at Fox Lake

Deputy Coroner Edward Conrad who was baffled by the finding of the skeleton of a man in a sitting position at Squaw Creek, near Fox Lake, Friday evening, voices the opinion that the mystery may soon be solved, it being believed by the authorities that the skeleton may be that of a well known Lake county man, who suddenly disappeared years ago.

Light on the matter was shed by Attorney E. V. Orvis. It is said the skeleton may be that of Daniel Batchelder, a peddler, who made his home with the Cole family in Fox Lake.

The Waukegan attorney informed the authorities that according to the stories told by his father, Batchelder mysteriously disappeared around the year 1850. He was a man of considerable wealth, Mr. Orvis says, and at that time it was generally believed by officers of the law that he had been murdered for his money and the remains hidden.

The skeleton was found by John Kaski, an employee of the Ford & Stowell grocery store in Rollins road a short distance east of Ingleside. The discovery was made while excavating for a new home. The bones were about one and one half feet below the surface of the ground.

Deputy Coroner said Saturday that he believed the bones to be about 25 years old, but later said there was a possibility the bones were as old as 75 years, which would be the case if they were those of Daniel Batchelder. Mr. Orvis reported that according to his information Batchelder was last seen alive within a radius of half a mile from where the bones were found.

The fact that the skeleton was in a sitting position and had not been encased in a coffin led authorities to believe that foul play had figured in the death and that the theory of Attorney Orvis may be the solution to the mystery.

On order of Deputy Coroner Conrad the bones were dug up and removed to Strang's undertaking rooms in Antioch Saturday. George Kay, owner of the property on which the bones were found, has been instructed to produce abstracts and records of the sale of the property. Through these the coroner aims to trace the person who owned the property at the approximate time that the body was buried.

BUSY BOBY

Little Bobby came crying into the house, rubbing the places where he had been butted by a pet sheep.

"But what did you do," his mother demanded, "when the sheep knocked you down?"

"I didn't do nothin'," Bobby declared protestingly. "I was gettin' up all the time."

A Lung Motor for Antioch

Several contributions were added to the "lung motor for Antioch" fund this week. A demonstration of the lung motor was made at the firemen's meeting on Tuesday evening showing its many advantages. The cost of the machine is $215.00. The department voted to continue the work of the collecting of funds for its purchase and selected a committee to make a solicitation and hope they get enough before Labor Day to complete payment. To date the money collected by The Antioch News is as follows:

T. E. Hansen	$5.00
Arthur Scheller	$1.00
Mrs. W. S. Mills	2.00
Lenn Barthel	1.00
J. A. Biers	5.00
Mrs. J. P. Scannell	1.00
W. O. Winch	5.00
Smith's Hotel	5.00
Cedar Crest Farm Employees	20.30
John Jurchik	2.00
Total	$47.00

Jail Two Youths for Fox Lake Auto Theft

Two Chicago youths were arrested Saturday morning at Fox Lake when they are alleged to have made a daring attempt to steal a machine owned by Nicholas Grunter, well known resident of that village.

The arrest was made by Chief of Police Riggs, who according to the report at the sheriff's office, saw the boys come into the village and watched their movements carefully.

The boys arrested gave their names as Wilfred Newell, 16 years old, and William Klimmansk, 14 years old, Chicago. At the sheriff's office it was said that Newell and his companion were in Grunter's front yard attempting to start his machine when Chief Riggs arrived on the scene.

They were booked on charge of attempting to steal an automobile and lodged in jail at Fox Lake. Later in the day Chief Riggs brought the lads to the county jail.

Chicago Fireman Is Drowned at Bluff Lake

Attempts to Rescue Boat Partners in Mid-Lake Capsizing.

Edward J. Rooney of the Chicago fire department and a veteran of the world war, was drowned early Sunday in Bluff Lake, near Antioch, after he had rescued his sweetheart and another girl.

Rooney, with his sweetheart, Miss Lillian Fort, 2431 S. Spaulding ave.; George Pappano of the Robert Club, Chicago, and Miss Fort's chum, were crossing the lake in a row boat.

The row boat according to testimony at the coroner's inquest sprang a leak about 300 feet from the shore, in front of the Bluff Lake hotel, filled with water, and overturned. Miss Fort and Pannano testified that while they clung to the bottom of the boat the fireman volunteered to swim to the shore for help.

Rooney had gone but a few yards, according to the testimony, when he was heard to cry out. After shouting once for help he sank. Whether he was seized with cramps or became entangled in weeds is not known. The verdict of the coroner's jury was that death was caused by accidental drowning.

The body was recovered several hours later by his buddies of Norman Cornwall post 275, American Legion, of which he was treasurer. Members of squad 7 of the Chicago fire department to which Rooney was attached aided in the search.

Rooney had been spending the week end with pals at the American Legion cottage at the lake. Miss Fort was the guest of friends.

Four County Boys to State Fair in Sept.

Four youths from Lake county have been rewarded for high averages made in agricultural subjects in the high schools, and are to be sent to the State Fair school at Springfield in September to get additional training in that line, the county to pay their expenses.

The boys were selected by T. A. Simpson, county superintendent of schools.

They are Arthur Christensen and Louis Paddock, both of Antioch high school, Dixon Vose of Newport and Emil Martens of Waukegan, the latter two attended Warren Township high school.

Vose and Martens won prizes last spring for their ability in dairy cow judging at the University of Illinois.

MANY FEATURES AT LAKE COUNTY FAIR THIS SEASON

The 71st annual Lake county fair, which will be held at Libertyville on Aug. 29, 30, 31 and Sept. 1, promises to be bigger and better than ever.

Republican day will be observed on Saturday Aug. 30, and the Stock Yards derby will be run on Aug. 31, at which time the fastest runners from the Hawthorne race track will appear.

There will be high diving acts, bare-back riding on a wild bull, a ferris wheel and many other free attractions. There will be a dancing pavilion and the usual midway.

There will be many awards and special premiums for cattle, horses, sheep, swine, poultry, agriculture, horticultural and apirly products. The year's round-up of Boys and Girls club work will occur. The Lake county fair will be the scene of the state's best dairy show.

Harness races will occur daily, and there will be a horse show, exhibiting some of the nation's best trained high school horses.

The 1925 model cars will be on display at the automobile show, which will be the most complete and attractive ever seen at the Lake county fair. There will also be a mammoth display of tractors and farm machinery.

Zen of the Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

CHAPTER XVII

"Zen!"

"How is he—how is Wilson?" she demanded, breathlessly.

"Sound as a bell," he answered, alarmed by her manner. The self-assured Zen was far from self-assurance now. "Come, see, he is asleep."

He led her into the whirlwind and turned up the lamp. The lad was sleeping soundly, his head buried in his arms, his little pink and white face serene under the magic skies of slumberland. Grant expected that Zen would throw himself upon the child in her agitation, but she did not. She drew her fingers gently across his brow, then, turning to Grant:

"Rather an unceremonious way to break into your house," she said, with a little laugh. "I hope you will pardon me. . . . I was uneasy about Wilson."

"But tell me—how—where did you come from?"

"From town. Let me stand in your kitchen, or somewhere."

"You're wet through. I can't offer you much change."

"Not as wet as when you first met me, Dennison," she said, with a smile. "I have a good waterproof, but my hat blew off. It's somewhere on the road. I couldn't see through the windshield, so I put my head out, and away it went."

"The hat?"

Then both laughed, and an atmosphere that had been tense began to settle back to normal. Grant led her out to the living room, removed her coat, and started a fire.

They sat in silence for some time, and presently they became aware of a gray light displacing the yellow glow from the lamp and the ruddy reflections of the fire. "It is morning," said Grant. "I believe the storm has cleared."

He stood beside her chair and took her hand in his. "Let us watch the dawn break on the mountains," he said, and together they moved to the windows that overlooked the valley and the grim ranges beyond. Already shafts of crimson light were firing the scattered drift of clouds far overhead.

"Dennison," she said at length, turning her face to his, "I hope you will understand, but—I have thought it all over. I have not hidden my heart from you. For the boy's sake, and for your sake, and for the sake of a scrap of paper—that was what the war was over, wasn't it?"

"I know," he whispered. "I know." "Then you have been thinking, too? . . . I am so glad!" In the growing light he could see the moisture in her bright eyes glisten, and it seemed to him this wild, darling daughter of the hills had never been lovelier than in this moment of confession and of high resolve.

"I am so glad," she repeated, "for your sake—and for my own. Now, again, you are really the Man-on-the-Hill. We have been in the valley of late. You can go ahead now with your high plans, with your Big Idea. You will marry Miss Bruce, and forget."

"I shall remember with chastened memory, but I shall never forget," he said at length. "I shall never forget Zen of the Y.D. And you—what will you do?"

"I have the boy. I did not realize how much I had until tonight. Suddenly it came upon me that he was everything. You won't understand, Dennison, but as we grow older our hearts wrap up around our children with a love quite different from that which expresses itself in marriage. This love gives—gives—gives, lavishly, unselfishly, asking nothing in return."

"I think I understand," he said again. "I think I do."

They turned their eyes to the mountains, and as they looked the first shafts of sunlight fell on the white peaks and set them dazzling like mighty diamond-points against the blue bosom of the West.

"It is morning on the mountains—and on you!" Grant exclaimed. "Zen, you are very, very beautiful." He raised her hand and pressed her fingers to his lips.

As they stood watching the sunlight pour into the valley a sharp knock sounded on the door. "Come," said Dennison, and the next moment it swung open and Phyllis Bruce entered, followed immediately by Linder. A question leapt into her eyes at the remarkable situation which greeted them, and she paused in embarrassment.

"Phyllis!" Grant exclaimed. "You here!"

"It would seem that I was not expected."

"It is all very simple," Grant explained, with a laugh. "Little Willie Transley was my guest overnight. On account of the storm his mother became alarmed, and drove out from the city early this morning for him." Mrs. Transley, let me introduce Miss Bruce—Phyllis Bruce, of whom I have told you.

Zen's cordial handshake did more to reassure Phyllis than any amount of explanations, and Linder's timely observation that he knew Wilson was there and was wondering about him himself had valuable corroborative effect.

"But now—your explanations?" said Grant. "How comes it, Linder?"

"Simple enough, from our side. When I got your telephone call all I could catch was the fact that you were mighty glad to get me, and had some urgent message for Miss Bruce. Then the connection broke."

"I see. And you, of course, assured Miss Bruce that I was being murdered, or meeting some such happy and effective ending, out here in the wilderness!"

"Not exactly that, but I reported what I could, and Miss Bruce insisted upon coming out at once. The roads were dreadful, but we had daylight. Also, we have a trophy."

Linder went out and returned in a moment with a sadly bedraggled hat.

"My poor hat!" Zen exclaimed. "I lost it on the way."

"It is the best kind of evidence that you had but recently come over the road," said Linder, significantly.

"I think no more evidence need be called," said Phyllis. "May I lay off my things?"

"Certainly—certainly," Grant apologized. "But I must introduce one more exhibit." He handed her the note he had written during the night.

"That is the message I wanted Linder to rush to you," he said, and as she read it he saw the color deepen in her cheeks.

"I'm going to make breakfast, Mr. Grant," Zen announced, with a sudden burst of energy. "Everybody keep out of the kitchen."

"Guess I'll feed up for you this morning, old chap," said Linder, knowingly. At the door he glanced back.

"I think Miss Bruce has something to say to you," he added, mysteriously.

They were alone—Phyllis and Dennison. He caught her hand in his and led her to the French windows. The sun was filling the valley with a flood of silver, and there was sunshine, too, in the heart of Dennison Grant. He had drunk his cup of renunciation, but he had not dreamed that at the bottom could lie a pearl so beautiful.

"Phyllis—Phyllis," he breathed. He reached out to take her in his arms, but she held him gently away; when he looked in her eyes they shone back at him through tears.

"Phyllis—Phyllis," He Breathed.

"Oh, Denny, you mustn't! I'm so sorry. You know what you have been to me. But you were so long, so long! Yesterday I promised Linder."

In the days that followed Dennison Grant drank his cup of renunciation anew. He worked his fields early and late; he noted the tiny spirals of smoke ascending like incense from Zen's cottage; but he went no nearer the Transley home than the end of his furrow. He had handed back Transley's wife from the edge of the abyss; he had made up his mind; that much was settled.

The battle that raged within him now centered about Linder and Phyllis Bruce. When he had recovered from the first shock of Phyllis's revelation and was able to think sanely he was sure that her heart might still be his if he went after it—and took it. It was another case of a man being worth his salt. But Linder was not Transley. He had spared Transley; could he be less generous with Linder? And what of Phyllis? Would she be happy with Linder?

Then Truth stood up before him in the furrow, as he plowed its slow length one hazy summer afternoon, and called him a hypocrite. He heard the voice as clearly as the champing of his horses on their bits. "Hypocrite!" cried Truth to him. "You make a great virtue of your generosity to Linder. Easy generosity that, while you continue to love—Zen Transley!"

Down by the river a spiral of smoke wound upwards from the Transley chimney, and even as Grant looked he saw an automobile trailing dust about the shoulder of his hill. It was Transley returning to his home.

Transley's wife had fortified her good resolutions behind an outburst of activity.

But there were times when the craving to be quite alone, where she could re-survey her life and bask for a moment in the luxury of old imaginings, became irresistible. On such occasions she would follow the road that skirted the cliffs of the river bank to a point where it turned in the basin of a now deserted quarry. The old quarry lay on the edge of the hills like a cup from which a side had broken and fallen into the river which boiled in a green foam a hundred feet below. The only access to this cup was by the road, no longer frequented, which Zen had chosen for her solitary rambles.

Once inside the quarry she was isolated from the world; here her vision could sweep the sloping bluffs across the valley, or the circle of blue sky above, and her thoughts could rove at will without prospect of being interrupted. The road by which she entered the cup was the road by which any intruder must enter it. It was also, as Zen was suddenly to discover, the only road by which one could escape.

It was upon the afternoon when Truth confronted Dennison Grant in his furrow that Zen made that discovery. Her self-imposed tasks completed for the day, she scoured the fruit stains from her hands, changed her frock, and took the now familiar trail up to the quarry. "I'll be back in an hour," she told Sarah. "I'm going to the quarry just to loaf and invite my soul."

The quotation was lost upon Sarah, who took refuge in her gift of silence.

At a point where the road rose high enough to command a view of the surrounding valley she stopped and swung a slow, half-giddy glance to the southward. There, sure enough, was the plow team of Dennison Grant, warping its slow shuttle back and forth across the brown prairie. For a long minute she fed her eyes and her heart; then resumed her slow course to the quarry.

Inside the great cup she was conscious of a sense of security.

Zen seated herself in a half reclining position on a great slab of rock and fell into a day-dream, watching the white with unseeing eyes the procession of white clouds which drove across the disc of blue sky above her.

Perhaps it was because of the position which she had taken, or her unconscious study of the sky, that she caught no hint of the presence of a man at the point where the road entered the quarry. From an ambush of willow scrub he had seen her stop and survey the fields where Dennison Grant was at work, and had followed her stealthily down the trail which led to her trap. Now he had her.

"How do, Zen?" he said, suddenly stepping into the open. "Ain't you glad to see me?"

The girl sprang to her feet and turned startled eyes toward the road—the only exit from this stone dungeon.

"Who are you? What do you want? Go away! I don't know you at all!"

The offensive smile broadened. "That is where I have the advantage of you, Mrs. Transley. I have changed. I admit, but you—you are as beautiful as ever."

"How dare you speak to me in such a way! You have learned my name. It is true, but I do not know you at all. Now will you go, or must I call my husband to throw you into the river?"

"That would be some shout, seeing that your husband isn't at home, and hasn't been for two weeks. You see, I may be a stranger, but I know some things. And even if he was at home, wouldn't you be more likely to call Dennison Grant?"

The man had gradually advanced, but still kept himself well between Zen and her only avenue of escape.

"Who are you?" she demanded again. "Why do you follow me here?"

"An old friend, Zen; just an old friend, come to collect an old account. Pay up quietly and there'll be no trouble, but raise a fuss and I'll throw you into the river. That wouldn't leave much evidence, would it? It's wonderful how a person who has been forgotten disappears and is soon forgotten."

Zen's eyes had gone large and her limbs were shaking. "Drak!" she exclaimed.

"Tight enough; your old friend, George Drakz. He came up close to her and extended his hand. "Ain't you goin' to shake hands with your old friend, Zen?" he smirked before her.

"You were no friend of mine—never," she flared back, while her brain was hunting wildly for some plan of escape. "I thought I had killed you. And I was sorry I had done it. Now I'm sorry I didn't."

"Well, now, Zen, that's too bad. I was willin' to forgive you, and hopin' we'd be friends. Don't you think it would be better to be friendly-like, Zen?"

There was a menace under his oily words that gripped her in terror. She decided to play for time. Perhaps Sarah—perhaps Denny—! If only Dennison Grant would come!

"Sit down, George, and tell me about it," she said. "I suppose I owe you an apology. Tell me how you got away, and where you have been all this time."

"That's better. We're goin' to be good friends, eh, Zen? The best of friends, eh, Zen? You and George 'll just sit down and talk it over."

She led him to the rock where she had been seated, and let him sit down beside her. He seized one of her hands in his; she would have withdrawn it, but he held it tighter.

"No, we're goin' to be good friends," he reminded her. "The best of friends—"

"Yes, but first tell me about yourself. How did you get out of the river that day?"

"Oh, I drifted ashore. Can't kill George Drakz. I was pretty full of water, and I lay on the bank for quite a while, but I came around in time. Then I seen what had happened about the fire, and I reckoned this was a good time to make my getaway. So I beat it right out o' the country, and nobody bothered followin'."

"Yes, yes, go on," she urged, eager to keep him absorbed in his story. "That was very clever of you. And then what did you do—after you got out of the country?"

"Got a job. No trouble for George Drakz to get a job. Then when the war came I tried to get on, but somehow they wouldn't have me. Said I'd be more useful at home. So I stayed on and had some pretty good jobs and some pretty nice girls, Zen, but I never got you quite out o' my head and I kept sayin' to myself, 'Some-time I'll go back and make it up with Zen.' And here I am. Ain't you glad, Zen?"

"Yes—in a way I am." (Oh, will nobody ever come?) "But—how did you find me? You knew I've been married since then?"

"So you have, and it hasn't spoiled you a bit. Oh, it didn't take me long to run you down. But I didn't go breezin' up to your house, like I might 've done if I hadn't been considerate of you. I didn't want no scandal about it, on your account. So I just laid low for awhile. That is how I found out about Grant."

"About Grant? What did you find out about Mr. Grant?"

He made to draw her closer to him, but she held him at bay. "Oh, you're innocent, ain't you, Zen? What about Grant? That's a good one. Your husband would enjoy that!"

"If you're going to talk to me like this we can't be friends, Mr. Drakz." (Still no sign of help.) "My friends mustn't think evil of me."

Drakz laughed. "They say a friend is one who knows all about you and loves you just the same," he leered. "That's me, Zen. I know all about you—you and this Grant fellow. How he's been visitin' you when your husband was away, and sometimes when the maul was away, too. I've kept pretty close tab on him. Hasn't been comin' around so often lately. Well, true love never did run smooth. Now I could tell your husband all this, and perhaps I ought to; Transley and me is old friends, worked together for years, but I ain't that kind of a fellow. You see, Zen, I know all about you, and I love you just the same. I love you—just the same."

He forced her toward him, and she knew that she had spun out her reprieve to its end. She was in the power of this madman. She tried to break from his grasp, but her efforts were puny and wasted against his passionate strength. She struck out wildly, but he crushed down her blows; wrapped his arms about her; drew her face to his.

"I came to collect an account, Zen," he hissed, "and now you are goin'—to pay!"

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON PLAUSIBLE YOUNG MEN

"Isn't it dreadful about poor Mrs. Fuller, Aunt Emmy!" exclaimed Molly. "That company she bought those bonds in has failed and she has lost nearly every cent she had."

"Do you know how it happened?" asked Aunt Emmy. "She got a lot of money from some so-called 'investment house' she knew nothing about. She answered it and they sent a plausible young man to her and he persuaded her that the company he was selling bonds for was a seventh wonder. The carelessness of some people is really criminal. Mrs. Fuller might have gone to her bank, asked for reliable information and saved her money. Any bank has or can get the facts about business concerns showing their condition. Had she bought bonds in a company that the facts showed had been meeting its obligations for years, had a good surplus and good business prospects, she would not be in trouble today. Instead, she took the word of that plausible man who was either deceived himself, or who willfully deceived her, or at least was not so much interested in protecting her as in selling bonds to her. There is really very little excuse for the Mrs. Fullers of today because reliable information on financial matters may be had so easily."

"If she only hadn't put so much money in those bonds!" commented sympathetic Molly.

"That's another thing it is unwise to do," replied Aunt Emmy. "It is always foolish to carry all your eggs in one basket. Now if she had put only part of her money in those bonds instead of all she had, she could have stood the loss. As it is there is no telling what straits the poor little woman has got herself into. Like every one else Mrs. Fuller was too greatly tempted by the promise of a high rate of interest on her investment. Her extreme ignorance of finance coupled with the desire for high interest caused all her trouble."

"There are few things more dangerous than thinking you can do something you know nothing about as well as somebody who knows all about it. How foolish that sounds just to say it! Mrs. Fuller may be able to go to the butcher and because of her judgment of cuts of meat, get the very best and most for her money but that is no sign that she can judge securities. Buying bonds is no different from buying meat. You simply must understand your subject. You must know how to select good bonds, and you must know when to sell and when to buy. The only way you can do this is to take the advice of some one whose business it is to study the bond market. Any bank large or small will gladly discuss investments with its depositors. When you have learned enough to depend somewhat on your own judgment make your own decision as to what to buy, then talk it over with your banker to make sure. Should he say, 'Don't buy,' abide by his decision."

"Mrs. Fuller's case has taught me a lesson, Aunt," said Molly. "I'll never take any chances like she did."

—ANNE B. AYMES.

THE REWARD

The individual banker should be much more than a mere lender of money, much more than a mere collector of interest. More than any man in his community, he has the opportunity to guide the farmer along lines of safe progress and toward substantial achievement. The banker in an agricultural district must know agriculture if he is to loan money to farmers and upon agricultural security. In addition to that, the banker is in touch with the activities of the business world. He has correspondents in the larger cities; he must, of necessity for the protection of his own business, look beyond the horizon of his immediate vicinity in order to foresee imminent changes in business conditions. The banker has the opportunity to be the point of contact between the farmer and these many other activities of the business world with which the farmer's business is so closely connected. The field is wide, the opportunity is great, the reward of confidence of one's patrons and neighbors—gained by service in their behalf—is worth the effort.—Walter W. Head, President American Bankers Association.

CO-OPS SELL A BILLION'S WORTH

According to the 1920 census figures, $721,983,639 worth of farm products was sold through co-operative marketing associations. The greatest growth in co-operative marketing has come since that time, so that it is safe to assume that much more than a billion dollars worth of products are sold co-operatively at the present time. A general survey shows that the larger co-operatives in fruit are handling nearly $200,000,000 worth of business annually. The large scale milk co-operatives do a total business of about $150,000,000 annually, while the tobacco group is doing a combined business of more than $100,000,000 annually. The cotton group has also passed the $100,000,000 mark.

Four Warren County, Illinois, banks have offered a total of $200 in prizes for the beef cattle club in that county.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

Church School 9:45 a. m.
Service of Worship 10:45 a. m.
Service of Worship 7:30 p. m.

We enjoyed a great treat on last Sunday in hearing Mr. A. M. James of Evanston. He talked in the morning on "The Work of the Methodist Church in South America," and in the evening with over 100 slides gave his famous lecture on "Agriculture in Brazil, Uruguay and The Argentine." A better description of his lecture will be found in the following reprint from the Daily Illini June 26, 1923.

"U. S. Should Not Neglect South America," says James. Urbana Chautauqua speaker praises southern continent and shows possibilities of development. People of the United States have devoted too much time to learning of Europe and its affairs and have slighted the continent to the south of them which is so full of possibilities for expansion. A. M. James told an audience of 500 people who attended the Chautauqua last night in Crystal Lake park. There are cities in South America more beautiful than any in Europe, the struggle of the Latin America republic for independence furnishes interesting and valuable history while the lands are fertile, and the possibilities for exploitation are great. German capital is regaining its foothold in South America since the war, the lecturer stated. America should take its part in the development of this country. The lecture was illustrated with lantern slides showing many and varied views of South America and its life. James, who is a Northern Illinois stock raiser and banker, went to South America to investigate the possibilities for stock raising. Last April he made talks before the local high schools and the University students."

Next Sunday we have the pleasure of hearing him again in the morning on "The Christian church from the time of Christ up to the present time in Southern Europe." In the evening a stereopticon lecture on "Egypt and Palestine," showing the civilization from the time of Menes (4000 B. C.) down to the time of Christ also Tomb of Tutankamen.

Please pass the word on to your friends and all come and enjoy these wonderful talks from a man who thoroughly understands his subject.

Bristol News

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Sherwood of Lake Villa were callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Fox Sunday.

Mr. Laurice Jacobson who is connected with the Schultz band at Racine was present at the concert Sunday afternoon accompanied by Mrs. Jacobson.

Mrs. B. S. Benson and two sons William and Bryant who have been spending the past month at the home of her father W. C. Bacon, returned to her home in Detroit Monday.

Mrs. Jess Stewart spent Wednesday in Delavan.

Mr. and Mrs. Krueger and daughter Elsie, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Jackson, Mrs. E. Dixon and two daughters Ruth and Eunice, Mr. and Mrs. John Maleski and son Herald accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Pitts and family of Kenosha spent Sunday at Waukesha Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Batterson are taking their vacation. Mr. Jess Stewart is taking his place as foreman at the Bowman plant during his absence.

Hollis Wlenke eighteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wlenke had two ribs broken and other internal injuries, Saturday. He was kicked by one of the horses when leading them to water. At first his condition seemed very serious but more hopeful at the present time.

Miss Violet King entertained her Sunday School class of twenty-nine in the beginners class Saturday at a lawn party. The little folks were entertained in playing games, refreshments were served on the lawn which was prettily decorated in pink and white.

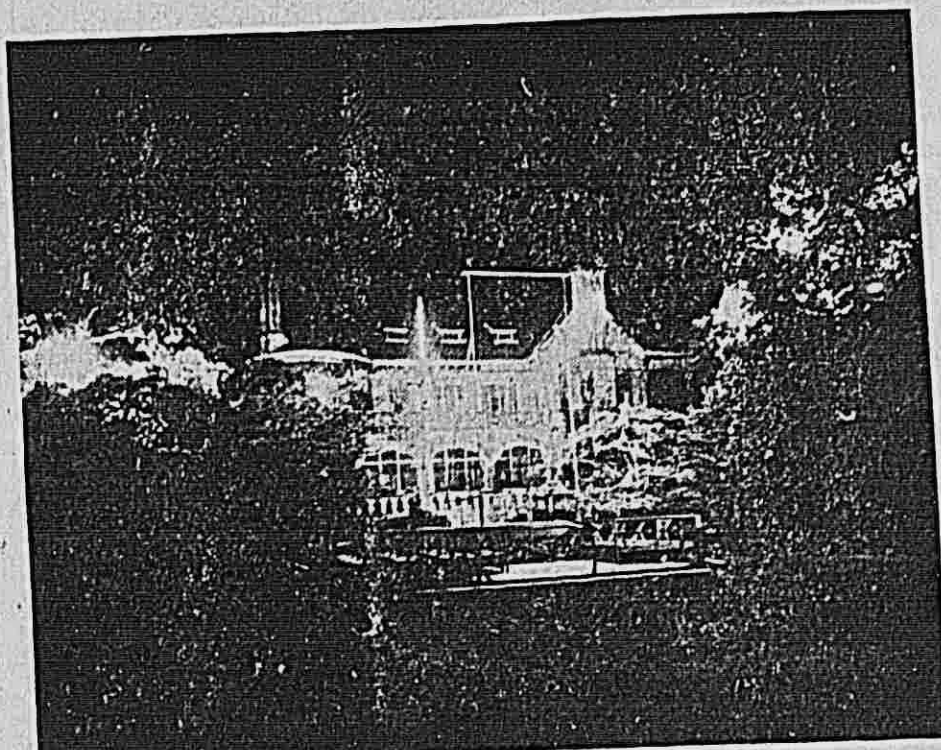

Mrs. Wm. Bacon entertained Mrs. Schenning and Mrs. Wicks of Silver Lake; Mrs. Burroughs of Wilmet; Mrs. Hutton of Salem and Mrs. Willett of this place at dinner Wednesday.

Mrs. Ida M. Stevens returned to Los Angeles, California, Wednesday after passing the summer with relatives and friends here and at Madison.

Mrs. Wm. Foulke and boys passed the week with relatives in Rogers Park and Chicago.

Mrs. Steen is entertaining her sister and family of Milwaukee.

Takes Night-Time Picture of Dawes' Evanston Home

Electrical engineers of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois are the skillful artists of this night-time picture of the home and lawn of General Charles G. Dawes where he was formally notified on August 19 of his selection as republican vice-presidential nominee.

The notification ceremonies did not begin before night fall. Confronted with the task of turning night to day so that the enormous crowd could have a clear cut view of the proceedings, the Public Service company engineers floodlighted the home and speakers stand by a unique arrangement of powerful lights concealed in the tree-tops.

Hundreds of other lights were strung on the trees dotting the extensive grounds between the house and lake thereby giving a lighting range to cover the entire crowd.

The whole lighting scheme was so arranged that persons on the speakers platform were distinctly visible hundreds of feet distant. Loud speakers carried the speakers' voices to the extreme limits of the crowd.

By wearing a pedometer, an Iowa woman found she usually walked 5 miles each day in preparing meals for her family of three. With the aid of a member of the cooperative agricultural extension service of that State, she studied the placing of her kitchen equipment. After rearranging it to meet her particular needs more effectively, her pedometer showed, according to reports to the United States Department of Agriculture, that the distance she had to walk in preparing one day's meals was but 2.5 miles, exactly half that required before, leaving her, she states, more time to read, write and sew.

THESE SHOULD NOT DRIVE

Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, in a bulletin on safe driving of automobiles, points out that while intoxicated persons and children under fifteen years of age, (unless accompanied by the owner of the car or a licensed chauffeur), are prohibited by the law from operating an automobile in Illinois, common sense suggests a number of other classifications of persons who should not attempt to drive a car:

1. Persons whose height does not permit their reaching the controlling pedals easily.
2. Persons who have not sufficient strength to operate control levers easily and positively.
3. Epileptics or others subject to fits or fainting spells.
4. Persons who do not know or understand the traffic laws, ordinary rules of the road and other safety provisions.
5. Persons with dangerously defective hearing or eyesight.
6. Cripples or persons minus arms or limbs whose defects interfere with their safe control of an automobile.

Home Building in Florida

Miami and suburban districts are experiencing the greatest boom in the history of that city. $13,291,094 worth of building permits have been issued since January first, 1924 in Miami City alone, while in the suburban districts within a radius of 8 miles from the centre of the city, fully $8,000,000 more has been authorized.

The opportunities of South Florida, especially the Miami Section, are numerous and business is established upon a sound basis. It is not a boom for a short period, Miami is building to stay, and real estate values have doubled and tripled during the last five years. Within the next ten years, it is reasonable to predict that Miami will be the largest and richest city in the whole Southland.

Among the most active suburban sections is Biscayne Park Estates, a beautiful sub-division owned and developed by Arthur M. Griffing, of the well known Griffing Brothers, who for the last 30 years have been classed among the foremost Horticulturists and Nurserymen of the South, and with his great knowledge and love of flowers has endeavored to make Biscayne Park Estates one huge flower garden. Stately Australian Pines and Eucalyptus outline the Streets and Avenues inter-planted with Palm, Hibiscus, Acalypha, Crape Myrtle and other choice trees and shrubs, while roses bloom to perfection the whole year through in the rich soil covering the entire development.

Many beautiful homes and apartments are now in course of construction at Biscayne Park Estates, while fully a score are being planned for the Fall building. These in addition to nearly a half hundred now occupied makes this restricted Suburb one of Miami's leading residential sections and owners of lots are quick to see the advantage of building in Biscayne Park Estates. Its location, seven miles from the heart of Miami on the Dixie Highway and new inland water-way (which will be 75 feet in depth, connecting Biscayne Bay with Lake Okechobee), is all that could be desired.

Southern Florida is becoming recognized more and more each year for its incomparable climate. The winters are ideal in every particular, while the summer months are a revelation. The average minimum temperature during the summer months is 72 degrees, while the maximum is but 84. This shows a very even temperature and combined with a low humidity and an almost ever prevailing breeze from the ocean and gulf, make the summers most pleasant indeed.

Miami Suburban real estate investments are safe and profitable. Interesting literature may be had by applying to Biscayne Park Estates, Miami, Florida. adv

Hints for the Household

TO SAVE FLOWERS

When you have a bunch of beautiful flowers you hate to see them wither—especially as fall progresses and the garden flowers are in danger of frost. With care, you can make flowers last a long time. As soon as the blossoms begin to droop cut about an inch off their stems and plunge the stems in very hot water for a moment. Then put them in a vase of cold water.

In a few hours they will resume the freshness of newly cut blossoms. This is most successful with peonies, chrysanthemums, carnations and some varieties of roses.

Delicious September Recipes

To have things seasonal and tasty is the aim of the thrifty housewife. So September is a welcome month, because she can use tomatoes in so many different ways and thus reduce the meat bill. For example: Tomatoes as a Substitute for Meat

Fried tomatoes with cream gravy, served with mashed potatoes make a substantial meal.

To Fry. Slice tomatoes a quarter of an inch thick. Dip them in flour, season and fry quickly until nice and brown on each side. Put them on a platter and pour over the gravy made with:—

1 large tablespoon butter (or fat)
1 large tablespoon flour
1 pint of milk (2 cups)
Salt and pepper

Melt the butter—add dry ingredients, then the milk gradually—stir constantly until thickened. Make gravy in the pan the tomatoes have been fried in and use the grease that may have been left.

Tomatoes Stuffed with Cooked Corn and Baked

Scoop out the centers of tomatoes. Fill the cavities with left over corn. Season and place a piece of butter on top of each. Bake about thirty minutes.

Tomatoes stuffed with cooked macaroni and cheese and baked about thirty minutes are delicious.

Tomatoes and Egg

Slice tomatoes thick—one slice at least, to a person. Place slices in muffin tins. Break egg on top of each slice. Season with butter, salt and pepper. Place in a hot oven and cook until egg is done. Grease pan to prevent sticking.

BRIDGE EATS

Any stuffed tomato salad such as chicken or crab meat—prettily garnished together with toasted cheese crackers and coffee is always good to serve at any bridge party.

Tomato Salad With American Cheese

This is a very hearty salad. Slice the tomatoes. Put on lettuce leaves. Dice cubes of American cheese and green pepper. Mix with mayonnaise dressing and pour over the sliced tomatoes and lettuce. Use plenty of cheese and green pepper.

Tomato Stuffed with Cottage Cheese

This is also a good filling and different. Scoop the centers out of uniform tomatoes. Fill cavities with cottage cheese. Serve on lettuce leaves with French dressing, made with:—

3 tablespoons of oil to
1 tablespoon of vinegar (or lemon juice)

Salt, pepper, a little sugar and lots of paprika.

KEEPING CHEESE

Cheese is a wonderful addition to have in the cupboard. But without proper care a housewife has trouble in keeping it from spoiling entirely. There are a few good cheese rules which I think help greatly in the use of cheese. Namely:—

Cover cheese with muslin.

Put in a covered dish.

Do not keep cheese in ice box.

When cheese becomes hard and dry—grate and keep to use in cooked dishes.

A soft crumbly cheese is best for cooking. If cheese preparations are cooked too long they become tough and stringy.

1925 License Plates to Be Brown and White

Pure white letters on a field of dark brown.

That's the color scheme for the Illinois 1925 automobile license plates for which Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson has just let the contract at a figure he believes is the lowest in the entire United States.

The contract was let to the C. H. Hanson Company of Chicago, one of the largest manufacturers of this type of article in the United States. The contract price is 13½ cents per pair of plates required on every motor vehicle in Illinois.

In addition to making the plates the manufacturer buys and prints patented envelopes; encloses the plates, together with a 16-page printed synopsis of the Illinois motor vehicle law, in the envelopes; pays the freight on the plates to Springfield; pays the storage until the plates are needed by the automobile department of the secretary's office; and pays the drayage on the plates from the warehouse to the door of the state house when the automobile department calls for another supply.

The plates, enclosed in the patented envelopes, are laid down at the state house door for 13½ cents per package. As applications come in all the automobile department has to do is insert in the patented holder a card bearing the information contained in the application for license and deliver the plates to the postoffice. The card serves as the applicant's certificate of registration.

The working out of this system by Secretary of State Emmerson saves thousands of dollars of state money.

Twenty thousand dollars in postage is saved annually by enclosing the certificate in the patented envelope with the plates instead of sending it separate.

In addition to the automobile license plate contracts, Secretary Emmerson also has signed a contract with Brady & Company of Peoria for chauffeur badges. This contract is at the rate of 7.8 cents each.

The contracts call for manufacture of 1,165,000 plates for pleasure cars, trucks, dealers and motorcycles and 100,000 chauffeur badges. Secretary Emmerson estimates this number will be sufficient to care for the state's needs in 1925 but the contracts specify that if more are needed the manufacturers must furnish the additional plates and badges at the figure named in the original order.

The 1925 plates with white letters and dark brown background will be something new in Illinois as this State's plates heretofore have run toward lighter backgrounds. The plates will be the same size as the 1924 licenses with figures the same size and letters in the same position—numbers three inches high with "ILL" in the upper right hand corner and "25" in the lower right hand corner.

The new plates undoubtedly will find favor with Illinois motorists as they add tone to any car.

POOR ROADS COSTLY BURDEN TO PRODUCERS HAULING MILK

The difference in the summer and winter rates charged by a truck hauling milk to Baltimore, Md., shows in a very substantial way the benefits of improved roads to farmers, according to the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. Practically a truck load of milk is collected along five miles of unimproved highway where for a six-month period 3.5 cents per gallon is charged for transportation and for the rest of the year only 3 cents. The farmers and milk producers are required to pay $5 a day additional transportation charges on 1,000 gallons of milk because of the poor road. This amounts to $900 for a six-month period. Based on this actual outlay, the farmers could afford to make road improvements to the extent of $3,600 per mile if no other traffic were benefited at all besides this one daily truck load of milk.

The number of animals on some of the various big-game reservations maintained by the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture have increased in such an extent that it is necessary to dispose of an annual surplus. It appears to be most advisable to use the turn-off from these areas every year for planting purposes. In the case of buffalo, however, there are no suitable areas of open range left in this country. Some animals of this species that are available for disposition may be used for exhibit purposes, but most of the surplus will probably have to be disposed of as meat.

MANY "CITY" COWS REPORTED

Now comes the "city" cow. This is the individual who lives within the corporate limits of cities as distinguished from the "country" cow who lives outside the city lines.

There are 1,200,000 "city" cows in the United States and 25,556,000 "country" cows, says the United States Department of Agriculture. The combined production of "city" cows and "country" cows in the United States last year was 110,000,000, 000 pounds of whole milk, or an average production per cow of 4,260 lbs. The effect of city life on the producing capacity of a cow is not shown.

U.S. Royal Cords

BALLOON ~ BALLOON-TYPE ~ HIGH PRESSURE

Built of Latex-treated Cords

TIRE building took a big step forward when the makers of United States Tires invented the Latex Process.

The added strength and wearing quality given by Latex-treated cords is something that the user of Royal Cords can tell you about from his own experience.

Royal Cords are the standard of value in cord tire equipment—even more certainly today than ever before.

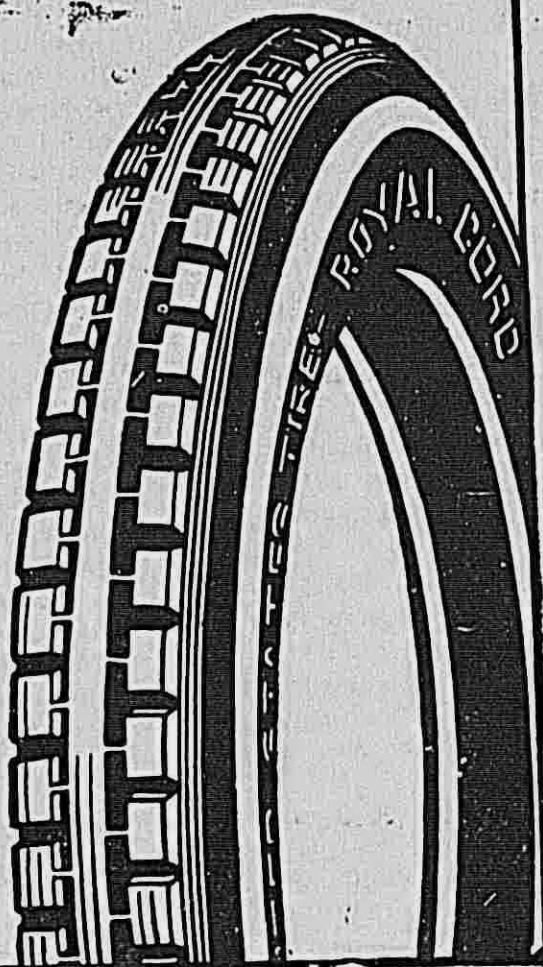

And this holds good whether you are considering a High-Pressure Tire, a Balloon-Type Tire to fit your present wheels and rims, or a Balloon Tire for a 20 or 21 inch wheel.

Making Interior Lighting More Useful

No. 11 in a series of statements about the Company's business.

A RECENT survey made by the Eye-sight Conservation Council of America shows that approximately 2,000,000 school children in the United States are backward in their studies. A group of 28,667 public school children with defective eyesight was given a special investigation which disclosed that 67 per cent were retarded in their studies one or more years.

Proper lighting is the direct means of protecting children's vision but obviously, this Company cannot regulate the use of electricity in the home or the efficiency of the lighting equipment. The use or misuse of this service rests with the customer, but the Company can, and it is anxious, to demonstrate what it considers proper lighting.

The Company has gathered a wealth of information on the subject of better lighting for the home, stores, offices and factories, and under the direction of its Lighting Engineer, this information is available to customers.

Better lighting is an important development in electric service and the Company wants you to enjoy it—to conserve the eyesight of the members of your family.

Not All Building Is Done With Stone and Lumber

GOOD WILL toward your neighbor,
LOYALTY to your home and country,
WHOLE-HEARTED CO-OPERATION with those who help you, and DETERMINATION to attain greater comforts and education.

Those are the materials of which GREAT COMMUNITIES ARE BUILT

Of these—"Good Will toward your neighbor" has a significant meaning. It means not only having a kind word and a smile for him at all times, but it means—ACTUALLY HELPING HIM. He'll do the same for you, thus creating the Spirit so absolutely essential to a Progressive community. Yes, there is another interpretation for that clause. It lies in cultivating that form of neighborliness that comes with—PATRONIZING YOUR HOME MERCHANTS. In doing so, you help them to become stronger and, therefore, better able to serve you more Economically and Efficiently. And don't forget to keep boosting—
